The Reformation Period showed several great intellectuals fight against ancient Rome's feudal religions and saved people from unreasonable doctrines. That's my favorite part learned from this course because freedom is what everyone spends their whole life choosing for and good ideas and beliefs can be strong weapons to help people fight against evil power. For Communism, since I'm from China, we all learned some important thoughts about Marx and his ideal society. Although I think it sounds unreal and too idealistic, I understand why he would promote such an idea and I love how he cares about ~~poor~~ people. For 2 great intellectuals Thomas Hobbes and John Locke, I think both of them provide reasonable ideas about human and the government, I agree with some of their ideas as shown on the graph above, and I believe all of the intellectuals used their ideas to help the world become better, and that's the reason why history and philosophy are important for everyone.
